

AGROSCAN – “Best in Test”

Every missed murmur and each avoidably barren sow per day costs valuable cash.

For this reason, every sow-breeder needs to know as soon as possible after servicing whether or not his sows are pregnant. Standard echo-sounder equipment can only produce reliable results from the fifth week of pregnancy. The use of Dopplers is tiring and demanding, especially in larger sow herds. Consequently, scanners have become very widespread in recent years.

Call us today and save!

Fearing the possibility that disease and epidemics could be introduced, many sow-breeders with large herds are now considering purchasing their own scanners. Veterinary & Breeding company scanning services are widely used, but still have an element of risk in this transmission of disease area! The flexibility, convenience & efficiency of owning your own scanner will pay dividends in no time at all.

According to the finance people who have evaluated the risk to reward ratio, anyone with more than 300 sows should not be without a real-time ultrasound scanner as part of their management practice.

The latest release from ECM France, the Agroskan A7 is the most affordable real-time machine on the market today

At the recent November 2004 Eurotier Exhibition, The German Agricultural magazine “Top Agrar” and the German Agricultural Society (DLG) tested five pregnancy scanners for usability. There was one clear winner! The Agroskan from ECM France & distributed by Vaucluse-APS throughout Australasia was the machine! The results are as follows:
